Presidents Report

WOW ! What a show !!

It's only been a matter of weeks since the show and we are already planning for our next show with some more classes and extended format. Stay tuned for more exciting news about the 2010 show.

I would like to thank all our volunteers, helpers and sponsors for our big showcase event. Without all their support, our show would not have been the success it was. I am very proud of our team including my Mum, Marie Bimr, Aunty Wobin and Bob, Kidda, Kerrie Pendred, Brian Orton, Carol Willding, Jan Garland and of course our international guests Bill & Corky Fairchild and Wayne Hipsley. Of course a big thank you to all the exhibitors for their terrific support and sportsmanship and we hope to see you all next year.

The ANZAC challenge was great fun and boy aren't those friends of ours from across the Tasman talented !? Well done guys. Hope to see you again next year.

Wayne Hipsley was kind enough to provide a report on our show and you can read it in this issue.

A selection of photographs from the event are included in this issue as provided by Tracey Bavinton and the team at Horse Photography.

See all the photos online at www.horsephotography.com.au.

There are still a few copies left of our outstanding Show Catalogue if anyone would like to purchase a copy.

Please remember that Stallion Returns are due by 1st August.

Price Increase: The 1st August will also see a price increase for most services provided by IMHR including membership and registrations. A new work order will be available mid-July and will detail the new pricing structure. We have kept the same prices since 2005 but unfortunately we cannot keep up with inflation at the current rates.

Re-processing Fees: Due to the amount of incorrect paperwork being received at IMHR office, we will now enforce the $5.50 re-processing fee for any transaction that requires paperwork to be sent back for correction. The cost of postage and stationery is covered by this fee. Please check your paperwork and include a work order to avoid paying this fee.

Till next time,

Your President.....

Leanne Williams

4th Time is Charm: Great Success

By
Wayne G. Hipsley, BSc, MSc
Hipsley & Associates
International Equine Consultants
Lexington, Kentucky
AMHA Senior Judge, IMHR Judge Educator

As a person who has attended three out of the four IMHR National Shows, the only thought that comes to mind is, "they keep getting bigger and better". The IMHR National Show has become the "show case" for the Miniature Horse breed, and what no better venue for this show than the new Australian Equine and Livestock Events Centre in Tamworth.

With over 360 individual competitors and horses entered in the show from many regions of Australia, the competition was extremely keen.

Five Days of Action

To give the exhibitors a few helpful hints on presenting their horses, a Showmanship Clinic was held the afternoon prior to the start of the first day of showing. The four days of competition started with the one day American Miniature Horse Association show, followed by the popular multi-judged events of the Double Shot, and then on to two days of the IMHR National Show. Included in this year's IMHR National Show was the ANZAC Challenge.

The shows were managed under the careful leadership of Leanne Williams, with a top staff of professionals to handle moment to moment action, Carol Wilding as Chief Steward, Brian Orton as Gate Steward/Announcer, and Jan Garland as Ring Steward. The professional leadership was demonstrated many times as this team kept the show moving on its busy schedule.

A top team of five judges officiated at the events. The judge for the AMHA show was Corky Fairchild and Bill Fairchild rendered his opinions for the IMHR National Show, a husband-wife from Georgia. Both are licensed and accomplished AMHA and AMHR judges from the United States. The Double Shot multi-judged classes were adjudicated by officials from the region. Wayne G. Hipsley of Kentucky conducted the showmanship clinic on the afternoon prior to the show and worked with learner judges to improve their decision making skills.

AMHA Show

The one day American Miniature Horse Association show proved to be an initial success for breeders of AMHA registered horses, giving them a chance to compete "head to head" with similarly registered horses. This type of competition is a fair method to determine the successes and direction of a breeding program.

Judge Corky Fairchild found the light number of horses to be overcome by the quality, giving the Supreme to a horse recently imported from the United States. All-in-all, Mrs. Fairchild found the quality of the horses to be reflective of their breeding and pedigree.

It was a very good first effort for the AMHA classes, something that needs to be continued to support the members and breeders of the American Miniature Horse in Australia.

Performance Classes

Mrs. Fairchild officiated over the IMHR Youth and Harness classes after completing the AMHA show. Her patience and explanations to the young people proved to be helpful and encouraging to the competitors, as many commented about the lack of communication from the Australian judges. The youth classes could count as many as 17 competitors in the ring seeking to take home the first place ribbon. The competition was very good for all age groups of these young horsemen and horsewomen.

The harness classes were light in entry numbers, but the quality of the horses was ever present. This is one of the divisions of the show that needs to be increased, where the owners can demonstrate additional uses of their Miniature Horses, as well as a place for horses to be shown without regard for conformation.

Double Shot

The ever popular Double Shot classes continued to prove their interest, with all classes being a challenge for the judges to select the "cream of the crop". It was very common to find classes of 20 or more horses with the top number being 28 in one class. The day was long due to the overwhelming number of entries, but regarded by all as a great success, with exhibitors anxiously looking forward to next years competition.

Futurity

The futurity classes within the IMHR National Show continue to prove the value of rewarding those for breeding and exhibiting quality horses. More breeders need to recognize the value of these classes, as it can add value to a horse if it is being sold, by making it eligible for competition in these exclusive classes.

National Classes

The IMHR National classes started on Saturday morning and continued through Sunday evening. The Miniature, Small Horse and Little Horse sections of the show drew a lot of attention by the exhibitors, filling two very busy, long days of competition.

Once again, the number of entries and the quality of the horses impacted upon the time necessary to adjudicate the classes. It was not uncommon to find many classes with over 20 horses competing for the top honors, making them eligible to move-on to be considered champion and perhaps even more within their respective divisions.

As a spectator, it was exciting to see the number of entries in a class. It was equally as interesting to hear the discussion in the audience of who was favored over another horse, the "crowd's" choices. And many times, they agreed with the judge. Yes, these classes were very well attended by spectators.

Judge Bill Fairchild had judged the AMHA World Show several times, judged in England and in New Zealand, and he commented on how the horses in Australia are very comparable in quality to those he has judged in North America. He had some tough decisions of comparing quality of conformation, type and movement to arrive at his final placing.

One thing for sure, the exhibitors were judged by an international standard for the breed, meaning their placings were very positive toward establishing a high standard of quality, and not influenced by local standards. The value of having one international judge of this caliber means the placings in the classes are not diluted by local judges and their lack of understanding, training and appreciation of the breed.

Coming down to the final placings, and the naming of the Champion of Champions proved to be exciting for all, competitors and spectators. Receiving this honor meant the reward from a long, hard year of competition and training had paid off. And coming from a single international judge added that more to the credence of their winning.

ANZAC Challenge

"Let the games begin" were the words uttered on Sunday morning as the ANZAC Challenge got underway. What a great concept to have a team competition between New Zealand and Australia, to further the bond between the horse industries in both countries.

The Australians did not have their best day, allowing their guests take home the top trophy. The teams comprised of youth and adult competitors provided entertainment for all in the showmanship, trail obstacle and hunter classes. It was a true test of skill and horsemanship between the competitors, along with a little luck of the draw.

Once again, these friendly types of competitions need to be encouraged and fostered. It promotes the breed and promotes the marketing of horses across the Tasman Sea.

More Classes

The list of other classes included the best head and movement classes along with other traditional performance classes. Some tend to think the best head and movement classes are novelty classes, and need not be taken seriously. Well, those that think that way are wrong, because if someone was seeking to find a mare or stallion with an exceptional head to improve their foals, guess where to look? "Right, at the winners of the best head class."

The best trot is one of the most important classes for breeders to monitor. According to the standards of judging, the Miniature Horse is supposed to be an athlete, and athletes move, must perform. Therefore, the horses competing in the best trot class are tested, compared to other individuals within the breed for their athletic ability at the trot, a true test leaving very little to the subjective side of judging. The winners of these classes reflect the results of breeding, and the potential for passing along these traits to future generations. Best trot is an important class.

Following in a similar philosophy is the liberty class. In 2008 there were only 4 entries in the liberty class, I remember well taking the microphone and talking about the importance of the class and the ease to which the class can be entered. And the turn around in 2009 is phenomenal with competitors testing their horses to see who really had the athletic horses who could perform at liberty. These were great classes with lots of fun for all.

The entries in the get of sire and produce of dam classes become the further test of the breeders' ability to produce like offspring. These are the classes that truly test the genetic base of the mare and/or stallion to influence the phenotypic outcome of their offspring. During these classes, the judge must ask, "Do these get/produce resemble each other in structure, type and conformation?" "Are these get/produce like in quality?" And, with these answers comes the final placing of the class, a very important class for breeders to monitor the success of their breeding programs.

Not to be denied, the center of action on Sunday was the over fences classes [Hunter, Show Jumper and Six Bar]; trail obstacle; and lungeline. These types of classes continue to prove the merits of owning a Miniature Horse as an activity horse. These types of classes require training and skill of the handler, therefore, these classes become a test for the success of their work. And besides, these classes give the audience a chance to further enjoy the action of the show.

Judges Training

Yes, included in this National Show was the opportunity for the training of future licensed judges. Four persons participated in the program with three actually working in the ring with the official judge during the classes. This learner judge experience is invaluable for the development of judges in building their confidence for adjudicating at horse shows. This learning experience helps them make the selections, participate in the conduct and operations of the classes and getting direct feedback from the official judge.

These types of educational activities contribute to the professional growth of judges, while achieving higher standards of competition for the breed.

The EVENT

The 2009 IMHR National Show was a huge success from all aspects. As the statement says, the IMHR National Show has become the "show case" for the breed. It is the annual event that becomes the final test for year's activities in training and preparation of the Miniature Horse.

The IMHR National Show is the place where breeders and exhibitors ultimately focus their goal of winning. This has rapidly become the annual event for all to note.....so, mark you calendars for next year, get your horses ready, and make plans to be there. It is your national event for your breed.

PROBLEMS OF THE BROODMARE

Are there special requirements for breeding older mares?

Regular breeding mares carefully handled, should be bred regularly. They will often arrange a 'holiday' in their own way and time, with or without human intervention.

Mares that are 20 years old should be given every chance to continue breeding, Make sure they are regularly wormed, their teeth carefully checked and filed, and they are maintained on a good nutritional ration, are kept caslicked and protected from sudden seasonal changes of feed and weather.

Foals of maiden mares under 4 years are smaller but not necessarily weaker than those of other older mares. Old mares that produce small, weak foals have uterine problems and will eventually also have trouble with conception.

Mares should be served as little s possible if the stallion is fertile. Repetitive service does increase the chances of conception but also increases the risk of introduction of infection, and old mares have less resistance to infection.

Do all mares require Caslicks and when should it be cut open?Caslicks operations have become more widely accepted as being part of a breeding programme rather than either an indication to a mare owner that his or her mare is not up to standard, or just something else for the vet to charge. It has been scientifically proven that a mare with a sloping vulva and low pelvic brim has significantly lowered fertility compared to mares with upright vulvas and high pelvic brims.

This is affected by age and, in old mares, can cause a 50% decrease in fertility if the mare is bred without being Caslicked after service. This should be maintained constantly, whether the mare is pregnant or not.

Old mares have slacker pelvic attachments and consequently tend to aspirate air and contaminants into the vagina and uterus when they are in season, which results in a lowered fertility. Poor mares fall into the same category but often, when they regain condition, may not need caslicking.

Young mares with sloped vaginas should also be stitched as soon as possible. Ideally, these should be avoided as breeders as they exhibit poor conformation. When a mare is sutured after breeding, and becomes pregnant, she should have the repaired area opened just prior to foaling and, certainly in old mares, this should be closed as soon as practical after foaling.

What effects do uterine cysts have on fertility and what treatment is recommended?

Cysts are caused by the accumulation of secretions of glands within the uterine walls. What causes them and why, are queries still to be solved. About 6% of mares show some cysts and, in most mares, these do not interfere with pregnancy. However, if the presence of cysts causes poor contact between the developing foetus, the placenta and the mare's uterus, then foetal death is a very real possibility. Large cysts have to be surgically removed. Thick-walled cysts seem to be permanent and, if only 1 or 2 are present, are usually ignored.

Next issue –

- ✚ Is there a problem if a mare tests in foal but continues to cycle?
- ✚ What should an owner do if a mare conceives twins?
- ✚ What is prostaglandin used for?

Training for Performance – Naturally Part 6

By: Brenda Peet

Last issue we started the hindquarters moving, now it's time to move onto the forequarters.

I have seen so many horses and owners have trouble with this.

Start by standing on your horses shoulder, make sure your belly button is facing toward their shoulder, put your right hand on the shoulder and the left on the nose and gently put pressure on both areas while you walk toward them. They will soon learn when you get into this position that they need to move away from you. When they move, take all pressure off, give them a rub and repeat the process.

This DOES take practice and time but you will get there in the end and also don't forget MIRROR everything, so you will need to go and do the same on the offside.

There is a second way and that's to neck rein. The same type of principal, but instead of the right hand on the shoulder you use your lead to put pressure on the neck. Put your lead on the neck at the same angle as the halter and put pressure there and on the nose. Same thing when they move, take all pressure off. Make sure the lead has pressure up and across the neck and not back as this will put pressure on the nose and you will find they will go backwards instead.... Hope this makes sense....

When you come to the box in competition and you are allowed to enter the obstacle, this is all you have to do (make sure you practice the box at home). BUT if you have to stay on the outside then there is an easy way to do it BUT you will have to teach your horse to side pass for that one ☺ next time

A note on Natural Horsemanship Backing

*Before using this technique in competition check your clubs performance rules

As some clubs won't allow this type of backing

Last issue we learned how to back your horse away from you now it's time to bring them back ☺

Slightly bend and comb the rope with the smallest amount of pull when they start to walk toward you stop combing and stand up straight with a big smile on your face. If they pull back, don't pull harder just keep the same amount of pressure and keep combing until they realize what you want.

If they pull really hard and you can't maintain the softness let the rope slide until they stop pulling, this is why a 12ft lead is essential. Then start again.

Remember if you start to feel annoyed, frustrated or angry

Walk away and start later when you are relaxed and calm

Your emotions do pass onto your horse.

Light hands = Responsiveness | Heavy hands = Resistance

Welcome to your new “Lets Discuss Colour” section of MHQ.

I hope that this may become a forum to discuss your Colour questions and perhaps improve everyone's colour knowledge...definitely mine included. My opinion regarding a readers horse colour, if asked for, will be just that...my opinion, garnered from information from many sources over the years and my own general observations. My favourite sources are the many colour sites on the internet, including Horsecolors.com and the book “Horse Colour Explained” by Jeanetter Gower. Anyone seriously interested in horse colour, should get themselves a copy of this great little book.

Any answers will always be open for discussion should any member disagree or have something to add. Where possible we will put difficult questions out to the readership, as many breeders have various specific areas of colour interest and expertise that far outweigh my own. If there is a particular colour you are interested in, that you want discussed or an article on, please email the Editor.

I am merely hosting the forum to generate interest and disseminate information regarding the myriad of colours we seem to generate with our miniatures. Having said that, and despite popular opinion, ALL horses, big or small, only come in two colours.....Red or Black.

These two base colours are then affected genetically to change, cover or dilute either body colour, mane and tail colour or to add white to these colours. To the average horse owner, though, the Base colours that we see are Black, Black/Brown, Brown, Bay, Chestnut. Further affecting these base colours are the genes that can dilute them, so we see the Dilutions: Dun, Champagne, Silver Dapple, Buckskin, Palomino, Perlino and Cremello. Other influences can also affect the colour that we see. There are a multitude of patterns of white. Some affect only small portions of the horse like the blaze and socks etc. and others can completely cover the base colour, like grey.

These colours are a discussion for another day.....first we need I think, to dispel some myths sometimes perpetuated by a very small number of breeders, sometimes to help sell horses, more often simply out of a lack of knowledge. One of the main reasons I see the need to get our colours right, is to protect the buyer! When you buy a horse, apart from bloodlines and conformation, often colour is another important aspect of the purchase. If the colour of the horse being purchased or its Sire/Dam (or Grandparents even) is incorrect, you may get a nasty surprise when you breed your new horse....eg breeding a Incomplete Frame Overo to another and the resulting heartbreak of a lethal white foal. Another fairly common nasty surprise, is buying a “supposedly” Silver Dapple (Taffy) or a Roan mare and breeding a Grey foal. If you are breeding for a particular colour, it is a huge disappointment when that lovely coloured foal soon loses it.

Always check the Registration papers, or better yet, make sure you see Mum AND Dad when you purchase your new horse. Having said this, there are no BAD colours! You just need to know what you are getting, and make sure it is what you want. Make it YOUR choice.

Also, colour is an important method of ensuring a particular foal has come from the parents as recorded. To date some foal colours on our registration certificates, recorded as belonging to specific parents, are a genetic impossibility! Without DNA testing and parent qualifying in place, colour may be the only option we have to confirm parentage.

Debunking Myths.....

- ☐ Chestnut bred to Chestnut can produce a colour other than Chestnut...MYTH
If you get a non Chestnut baby from what you thought were two Chestnuts.....no matter what it says on their papers, one of the parents is NOT a Chestnut. In most instances, one of them will in actual fact be a Silver Bay.
- ☐ Grey can be "carried" and passed down from a non Grey horse.....MYTH
Even two grey horses can produce a solid horse, and that resulting horse can NEVER produce a Grey foal unless bred to another Grey.
- ☐ Pinto bred to Pinto must produce a foal that carries Pinto OR a horse that is Homozygous for Pinto.....MYTH
It is very common to see ads selling a solid foal stating, " will breed Pinto as has heaps of Pinto breeding behind it". This is a fallacy. It will never breed a Pinto foal itself.
If your Pinto breeds a solid foal, whether it has a dozen generations of Pinto behind it or not, it CANNOT produce a Pinto foal (again, unless bred WITH a Pinto, when a resulting Pinto foal will have come from the Pinto parent, NOT the solid).
Two Pintos, on occasion, will produce what is known as a Homozygous Pinto. This means that EVERY foal this horse produces will be Pinto.
Not every Pinto to Pinto breeding will produce this, in fact, very few will, but you must have both parents Pinto to produce one.
These Homozygous foals will usually have "Paw Prints" that will distinguish them. Also there is a Genetic test for them. This will be a discussion for another time as well.
- ☐ A horse can be called a Grulla or Buckskin if it looks a funny colour....MYTH.
This was all the rage when I was first getting into Miniatures. Most people were of the opinion that "if it looked like it, it is!" Fortunately most breeders are much more informed these days.

All colours are produced from Genetic code...if the Genes don't support the colour then it is NOT THAT COLOUR.

Well, this is just a starting point for future discussions.

Please send in any questions, or photos of your horse whose colour you are not sure of, and lets see if we can find the answer.

Golden Oldie

Mount Morgan Bella Donna (Bella) Age: 20-something Breeding: Unknown
Colour: Black bucksin

Like many 'mature' ladies, Mount Morgan Bella Donna – or just plain Bella, is a little shy about her age. It's fair to say she's somewhere between 20 and 25, though if asked she'll say she's a youngster of 19.

Bella's long life has been a busy one. Until her mid-teens she was a working girl, with an active career visiting nursing homes and pre-schools introducing her audience to the delights of horses.

Her gentle, easy-going nature made Bella the perfect horse for my daughter Kate to learn the basics of handling and showmanship, and Bella joined us about eight years ago, when Kate was aged 3.

Some of Bella's career highlights as a 'show horse' include Reserve Champion Small Horse Mare (Warren Show) and taking Kate to Reserve Champion Junior Handler (St Ives Show) when Kate was just 5 years old.

These days, Kate (now aged 11) is busy showing our younger miniatures – still using the skills honed with Bella. The lady herself has hung up her show gear and is officially in retirement however Bella's life is far from retiring. She spends her days devising new ways of breaking into the feed shed, or teaching the younger minis how to unlatch the stable gates and make a daring escape into the paddock. It's all in a day's work for our golden oldie!

Vale "Chilli" Willoughby Park Shanina

Her little legs could hold her up no more. She had gone for 4mths with her broken leg, but the other limbs were getting too "deformed" with carrying the weight.
In Gods Care.
